Be Permitted to Stay

PARIS, March 10 (AP)—The Ministry of Interior today revoked an order expelling Benjamin Bradlee, a Newsweek magazine correspondent, from France.

Mr. Bradlee was summoned to police headquarters and handed a decree signed by Interior Minister Gilbert Jules rescinding the expulsion order.

Mr. Bradlee was picked up by police Tuesday outside his Paris office and taken to police headquarters where he was told that his "presence here is compromising the public order." He was given forty-eight hours to get out of France, but the United States Embassy intervened and won a delay.

The correspondent said he never was informed of the charges that prompted the original expulsion order. Interior Ministry sources said it stemmed from attempts by Mr. Bradlee to interview rebel leaders during a recent trip to Algeria.
